

MUSEUM SUPPORT GROUP

Americans of all races are some of the most generous people in the world.

We give of ourselves and our resources abundantly when there is an earthquake in Haiti, a mudslide in China, or any other disaster anywhere in the world.

We spend billions of dollars overseas in what we call third world countries to alleviate the pain, suffering and hunger of their peoples.

One would think there is no suffering, pain or hunger within our borders. After all, we give to the rest of the world so generously; how could there be people in our own country who want for basic necessities? Children who haven't enough to eat, or proper medical care, or clothes to wear.

Unfortunately, the fact is, we have children in Appalachia and on Native American Reservations, within the borders of the United States, who want for common necessities.

The Kentucky Native American Heritage Museum obviously does not have the resources to solve all these problems. However, we can help to solve one problem.

We have access to clothes. A lot of clothes as a matter of fact. Children's cloths, teenagers clothes and adult clothes. We have access to winter coats that are desperately needed by Appalachian and Reservation children.

What we don't have is a storage facility to store these clothes, a vehicle large enough to transport these clothes and/or fuel and vehicle maintenance funds to transport these clothes.

What we do have is access to these clothes and the volunteers to obtain, sort and deliver these clothes.

Please join us in our efforts to help these third world areas, that lie within our own boundaries, by becoming a member of our Museum Support Group.

Membership entitles you to receive an annual report regarding museum activities and more specifically our efforts to provide clothing to needy individuals and families. It also entitles you to free admission to the Ky. And the Museum Pow Wow in Corbin, Ky.

We are also negotiating with larger organizations to be able to offer vacation packages and other benefits at discount rates in the future.

Please, won't you join us by filling out the enclosed membership form. Membership cost only $10.00 per year, but when we put our money and efforts together small steps add up to long strides.
